Now

With F.M.L.

Senator Sam Ervin, whose Senate Committee is parading Watergate principals across the nation's TV sets, was at the 1971 New Orleans reception.

At 76, he is atypical of the Southern Democratic senator, but is also the U. S. Senate's authority on the Constitution. He and Sen. Baker of Tennessee, his co-chairman, 47 and Republican, are moving this CIA-type panorama before your eyes.

This reception followed closely a committee session of NNA public notice in which the majority was resisting research into notice of all kinds. NOW as chairman was making statements about the need for broader public information through legal notice and every other print means. Allusions to Sharpstown and the "Dirty 30" came up. And it wasn't even close that day.

Then I briefly met the Senator from North Carolina at the reception, euphemism for cocktail party for 500 to 600 editors and publishers; and I heard his speech the next morning for the need for protection of the First Amendment, which he defended admirably for press and public alike.

Then I thought: "Another high-minded type who happens to believe in freedom of press and the public's right to know. He probably doesn't need it, but 'good luck'."

And when I heard Senator Ervin was going to conduct hearings on the Watergate, I knew it was going to be as open as ground rules with the White House and the media could make it.

This committee's role leads to no indictments. It leads to presentation of facts, since the only power the Committee may invoke is "Contempt of Congress" proceedings if a witness fails to show. Perjury charges may emanate.

But the Ervin Committee is largely a "show and tell" exercise which will extend the public's knowledge of Watergate and establish the need for sweeping electoral changes if the system is to maintain any efficacy here or abroad.

Senator Sam, who quotes broadly from the Bible and Shakespeare and carries a miniature of the U. S. Constitution, and his committee will likely make this episode in "the dirty tricks department" (which is CIA talk for espionage) a memorable turn in American politics.

Architect Says Wait On Law For New Jail

Milam County Commissioners were advised by an architect and engineer to wait on building a new county jail until a new law, now under consideration by the 63rd Legislature, is passed.

The architect and engineer met with commissioners in a regular meeting Thursday morning.

The architect said it would be best to wait to see what the new law would require, because if a new jail were built now it could be out of date before completion.

Under the proposed law, to be enforced by the Texas Department of Corrections, the Department would have the power to set standards for the state's jails.

Commissioners in recent action have purchased land for a new jail east of the courthouse. Part of the present building will be torn down to make room for the jail.

A formal agreement with the architect was signed Thursday.

The new jail will be built with the county's revenue sharing funds, part of which was used to purchase the land.

Area Roundup

Prowler Stirs Belton Residents

BELTON

"If the town prowler taps on your window, the best thing to do is call the police." That's the advice for Belton residents who are calling at the rate of six to 12 nightly, since attacks by a prowler or two have been going on. Descriptions of two separate men have been given, and in two cases the prowler or prowlers have threatened the victim with a knife, and have taken money. The prowler apparently waits until the husband leaves the house, then tries to climb in a window or get in the door.

Second Drowning At Somerville

SOMERVILLE

Lake Somerville claimed its second drowning of the year Sunday afternoon as 14-year-old Joe Plato of Rosenberg was pulled from the water at the Overlook Park. The youngster was reported to be with several that were diving and swimming near a boat in the lake. He was missed by adults some 20 minutes later and was pulled from the water and given artificial respiration but to no avail. Joe was the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Plato of Rosenberg.

Trustees Seek School Annexation

CALDWELL

The Burleson County Board of School Trustees held a public hearing on the issue of annexing the Cooks Point and Deanville Common School Districts to the Caldwell Independent School District. Board members heard a heated discussion with the proponents of annexation speaking for 35 minutes followed by over 40 minutes of argument presented by Deanville school board member. The board adjourned without taking any action on the issue.

Glider Club Organized

HEARNE

Two pilots have received their glider instructors rating following successful completion of a test administered by the Federal Aviation Administration. Irvin West and George Sliner have formed a gliding club at the Hearne Airport called the West Wind Soaring Club. They have two gliders, plus two autos equipped for towing and a unique tow plane, a 240 hp Waco. The club has 18 members with the bulk being either students or personnel from A&M University.

Culprit Outruns Police Cars

ROCKDALE

Rockdale police have 13 charges awaiting a local man who escaped them in a high-speed chase that extended over a number of city streets and some six miles north of town Sunday night. The chase included speeds of 80 and 100 miles per hour through residential streets and on to Farm Road 487 north. "We know who the man is," the police chief said, "and we are awaiting Waco authorities to pick him up for us."

Wolf Hunt Is Fatal

ROSEBUD

J. L. Herring, 55, was killed instantly early Tuesday morning from an accidental gunshot wound. His wife said he had heard a wolf in their pasture near their home and had taken his .22 rifle out to shoot it. She heard the shot, and when he did not return to the house, she went out to see about him. She found him near a fence.

TSTA Argues Cost Of School Bill

AUSTIN

"The estimated costs of House bill 946, the bill to revise the Foundation School Program and its financing, have been greatly exaggerated by its opponents," L. P. Sturgeon, executive secretary of the Texas State Teachers Association, said Friday.

HB 946 passed the House finally on Wednesday by a 94-44 vote. A committee hearing in the Senate was held 3 p.m. Saturday (May 19).

Opponents argued that the measure will cost anywhere from $1 billion to $2 billion. Stugeon said such figures are not true comparisons.

Sturgeon made these points:

-- The official Texas Education Agency estimate shows the total annual cost of HB 946 to be $398 million for the Foundation School Program (FSP) when it is fully implemented in 1979, six years from now.

-- The TEA estimate shows the maximum possible cost of state support for the optional local leeway program is $196 million yearly by 1979.

-- The FSP cost is only $32 million (in 1974-75) for the next biennium, plus a possible $65 million in local leeway support.

-- The leeway program funds may not be fully used, because not all districts will provide necessary matching funds to qualify.

-- That opponets have pyramided the costs of HB 946 over a period of several years to show the worst possible situation.

-- That tax revenues also pyramid in the same way, as do the costs of any state program, but no one has talked about that.

HB 946, co-authored by Reps. DeWitt Hale and Dan Kubiak, is strongly supported by TSTA. Sens. A. M. Aikin Jr. and A. R. Schwartz, are the Senate sponsors.

Speaker Price Daniel Jr. reported discovery of an extra $36.4 million in state funds Thursday to save the House's public school finance bill.

Governor Briscoe, sticking with his insistence on no new taxes, wants to put off a permanent answer to the school problems for two years while giving $39 million in emergency grants to the 113 poorest districts in 1974-75.

Daniel toid a news conference that at least $70 million should be available for financing the House bill -- if passed by the Senate -- over its initial two years. The bill can be trimmed to fit that amount, he said.

Daniel said the Legislative Budget Board had obtained the comptroller's new estimate Thursday, while the Texas Education Agency changed its forecast of state aid Wednesday, based on a decline in average daily attendance at public schools.

And if no further money can be found, Rep. Kubiak said the most likely place to cut the school bill would be aprovision lowering teacher-pupil ratios in 1975-75.

HB 946 is designed to meet the questions raised by the federal district court in the Rodriguez case from San Antonio. Although the U. S. Supreme Court overruled the lower court, it recognized that problems exist in Texas school financing and said the Legislature should solve them.

Mid-Continent Reports On Milam Oil

Milam County, which has had recorded oil production since 1921, last year produced 182,918 barrels of oil at the rate of 500 barrels a day, according to figures released by Texas Mid-Continent Oil and Gas Association, Dallas.

Production in the county in 1972 boosted Milam's production total through the end of the year to 6,467,177 barrels.

In the face of unprecedented demand, Texas oil fields last year produced almost 1.3 billion barrels of crude oil, an all-time record for the state. This figure was tops among the nation's oil producing states and represented some 38 percent of total U.S. production, according to Texas Mid-Continent.

Brezhnev Visits West Germany This Week

By George Vine

BONN

Reuter -- Soviet communist party leader Leonid Brezhnev will visit West Germany for the first time next week, setting foot in a country that until recently was for communist propagandists the "aggressive, militarist reationary crucible of Europe."

To Brezhnev and Soviet trade experts who will accompany him the magnet of West Germany lies in the steel cities of Dortmund, Essen and Duisberg, which form the basis of this country's present industrial power.

Chancellor Willy Brandt, architect of "Ostpolitik" (eastern policy of reconciliation with communist Europe), once declared that West Germany was an industrial giant, but a political pygmy. It was his decision to recognize the realities of Nazi Germany's defeat 25 years ago that has made the coming visit of Brezhnev possible.

Before Brezhnev's arrival the key link in the chain of treaties to put Bonn's relations on a normal basis with its communist eastern neighbors was riveted in place. This is the basic treaty with communist East Germany which means that West Germany no longer contests the rightful existence of the second German state and will accept the entry of both to the United Nations.

The basic non-agression treaty with the Soviet Union itself, recognizing all 'post World Ward War II frontiers in Europe, was signed by Brandt in Moscow in 1970. A similar treaty followed with Poland by which West Germany formally ceded the "lost lands" annexed by the Poles.

Another treaty with Czechoslovakia, to nullify the notorious Munich "appeasement" pact of 1938, is now being hurried through the final stages of completion while two further agreements to establish diplomatic relations with Hungary and Bugaria are pending.

Brandt has repeatedly emphasized that his Ostpolitik is anchored to the western alliance and carries the full endorsement of West Germany's partners in the Atlantic Pact.

At the same time a major aim of the Ostpolitik is to give West Germany a freer hand in safeguarding and actively pursuing its own political interests.

The importance of Brezhnev's visit lies in its signal that the Kremlin now takes a new attitude towards West Germany.

The big change came a little over 18 months ago in September, 1971 when Brandt and Brezhnev met at Oreanda, in the Crimea, took off their coats and engaged in a informal man-to-man talk in their shirtsleeves. Out of this meeting sprang the decision to establish a mixed commission to strengthen cooperation in trade, science and technology.

This 16-man commission, comprising some of the most influential leaders and officials of both countries, has now met several times. The Soviet ambassador to Bonn, Valentin Falin, stated a few months ago that trade between West Germany and the Soviet Union could be trebled by 1980.

West Germany's trade with the Soviet Union at present represents only about one percent of its total world trade.

In Time?

Sheriff Black is right, of course. We need to build a new jail as soon as possible if interim repairs are difficult to have done, which they are.

It is unfortunate, but the dramatic fall and injuries to a man going out of Milam Jail the other day probably dramatized the jail problem.

The Sheriff lets inmates walk in the walk around because of heat this time of year. And anybody with a yen to go over the side can pry his way through, around or out of the wall, window or even ceiling of the old brick jailhouse.

We know the county is working on the problems, having purchased the site for a new jail. We hope it is in time, like Sheriff Black, to keep somebody from breaking his neck while breaking out of the old jail.

Upon This, We Build...

Additional water service for Milam area residents is in the offing in the Salem-Elm Ridge Water Supply Corp.

In fact, only two areas of the county are without lines or proposed lines, according to Henry Ivey, Milam FHA supervisor. Those are in the Brushy Creek and Jones Prairie areas, near the Brazos River.

The proposed $130,000 extension of S-ER Corp. will reach a minimum of 80 additional rural customers, bringing to more than 1,700 the total in Milam County among the numerous water systems.

The basic stuff of water goes to practically every home in Milam County, rural or incorporated town. This is a stabilizing force in rural population, whose Milam decline is slowed to a trickle. The trek back is beginning.

Considering Milam County is more than 1,000 square miles, this is an excellent record of serving basic need to people. FHA organization among community leaders and finance assistance through bank - FHA co-operation have led the way.

We are harnessing the ground water which is fed both by some of the active underground and surface stream action in the Southwest.

Upon this kind of record, we build.

Aristocracy Big Business In Communist Poland

By Trevor Wood

WARSAW

Reuter--Aristocracy is a thriving business in communist Poland, where a growing number of people are assuming fake or bought titles, according to the authoritative communist weekly Polityka.

In a rare admission that such class snobbery still exists, the weekly said: "The fascination with gentry has survived the bad period and has come out of it in quite good shape, especially now when this kind of snobbery does not cost anything."

The "bad period" it referred to was the decade after World War II when it was found better not to admit to an aristocratic background.

But, Polityka said: "It seems that 30 years after the creation of the Polish Peoples State, many of the intelleigentsia city dwellers, if allowed to choose their descent, would reach for an aristocratic title."

Polityka published a two-part report, covering several pages, on the Polish aristocracy. Observers believed it was the first time a communist newspaper here had written on the subject.

The newspaper quoted a 1968 report as saying there were only 124 families in Poland with real aristocratic titles but 212 families with either, fake, once - usurped or bought titles.

"We know that the former group is dying out, but that the latter is constantly growing for some incomprehensible reason," the newspaper commented.

Warsaw engravers had their hands full producing coats of arms, many ordered by visiting foreigners and especially by Poles from the United States. Historians were busy producing genealogical trees and books on Polish heraldry, when available, sold for inflated prices.

The present fascination with aristoracy contrasted with the years after the war.

The newspaper quoted members of the aristocracy as recalling how one princess lost her job as a trained children's nurse and how another had to appeal to Poland's president before obtaining the right to study.

It also reported that the late Prince Adam Sapieha, a Roman Catholic cardinal and archbishop of Cracow, threatened to leave his see in 1945 along with fellow-aristocrats evicted from their homes under government decree.

On the present situation, Polityka said aristocrats today live mainly in Warsaw, in apartments better than those of average white collar workers or intelligentsia.

Commenting on their well-furnished homes, the newspaper said: "It is surprising that many of these people, who once owned several palaces with collections better than in the museums, after losing all they possessed, returned to the hobby of collecting beautiful and valuable items."

The aristocracy, which bears such names as Radziwill, Czartoryski, Potocki, Zamojski and Tarnowski -- all protected by law -- has turned to a number of trades, from film acting to breeding dachshunds, from gardening to translating.

Younger members have gone into medicine, become artists, accountants or engineers, but the newspaper said it had not heard of a blue collar worker among them.

As for the future, the newspaper said the aristocrats were an advertisment of peoples Poland as a home for all the people.

"Once the revolution is finally won, the best of the good names, cleansed of involvement in exploitation and politics, will become only a respectable anachronism and history."

Golden Gate Bridge World's Suicide Center

By Ivan Sharpe

SAN FRANCISCO

Reuter--The Golden Gate Bridge, a symbol of majestic beauty to the world since its 1 1/2-mile span was opened on May 28, 1937, is also a mecca of sorrow.

While some 600 million vehicles have been crossing the bridge, 478 people are known to have leaped to their deaths in the choppy waters of San Francisco Bay.

The bridge is the suicide center of the world.

Once it used to be the Eiffel Tower in Paris, but the bridge overtook the much older tower in suicide leaps several years ago. Now the bridge is over 100 deaths ahead.

And that isn't the whole story. There has been speculation that the official death toll may represent only half the actual number of suicides, since many persons may have jumped without anyone noticing.

And another 967 would-be jumpers have been prevented from taking the fatal leap by bridge workers, passing motorists or police.

But the bridge's dismal reputation as a symbol of death may at least be coming to an end. The bridge board of directors voted to spend $67,500 on engineering design and wind tunnel tests for a suicide barrier that would change the look of the famous bridge and cost perhaps one million dollars to install.

The plan, which still has to have final approval, is to replace the present four-foot-high railings, which are easy to scramble over, by eight-foot railings with vertical, slender steel rods six inches apart.

Critics claim the new railings would destroy the beauty of the bridge and restrict the splendid views for the tens of thousands of people who stroll across the bridge every year.

Another technical objection is that the barrier could make the bridge vulnerable to damage by high winds, such as the hurricane-like blow in 1951 that forced the bridge to close for a few hours because it was being blown out of shape. This is why the new barrier design is having wind tunnel tests.

But the real debate for the past 20 years or so has been over the mystical attraction of the bridge for suicides. Will any barrier stop a person bent on suicide? Or, if he cannot jump off the Golden Gate Bridge, will he instead leap from one of the other bridges that cross San Francisco Bay?

Psychologist Dr. Jerome Motto suggests: the bridge is like having a loaded gun around. I think it is the responsibility of those in control to unload the gun."

Other psychologists have told the bridge directors that most of the would-be jumpers would probably get over the suicide impulse if thwarted by a barrier.

Bridge director Michael Wornum calls the barrier a "matter of conscience." Another director, Peter Tamaras, says: "Even if it saves only one life, it will be worth the cost."

But director Lowell Edington pointed out at today's directors meeting that the bridge accounted for only four per cent of the suicides in the San Francisco area. He said more than 12,000 suicides have been recorded since 1937.

San Francisco has long led the nation's cities in suicides. And California's suicide rate has increased nearly 20 per cent in the past decade.

Suicide prevention expert Nancy Allen of Los Angeles said earlier this month that women's liberation with its increased social pressure was driving more women to suicide.

Many San Francisco suicide experts believe that young people come to the city from other parts of the United States expecting glamour and excitement. But they get depressed by loneliness, the difficulty of getting jobs, and sexual pressure.

Edington suggested that a logical reason for the Golden Gate Bridge's suicide lure was the bridge's spacious sidewalks, and the fact that the bridge was the only one crossing the bay that people could walk across.

Of 35 suicides last year on the bridge, he said, only eight stopped their cars on the bridge and jumped. His proposal to close the sidewalks was rejected by his fellow directors.

French Film Maker Tries Opera

By Paul Majendie

PARIS

Reuter--One of France's most revered film makers, Rene Clair, has turned his considerable talents to directing opera - a new experience for him at the age of 74 and one which he hugely enjoyed.

The work in question was Gluck's "Orphee and Eurydice" which has played to packed houses at the ornate Paris Opera House ever since it opened in April.

As one critic rapturously wrote: "Visually and dramatically it was a feast for the eye... a spectacle of absorbing visual theatrical strokes mixed with some superb singing and dancing."

Rene Clair was also pretty pleased with the results of the performance himself.

Resting in his villa at Saint Tropez, southern France, after a strenuous round of rehearsals he said "It was something so completely different for me and that's very important thing when you are my age.

"I never encountered any difficulties with any of the singers and the whole thing is a great success judging by the full houses every night."

Clair, who has written or at least collaborated on every film he has directed since his first 50 years ago--including "Anous La Liberte" and "Sous Lestoits De Paris"--found that he relished the complete contrast with the cinema world.

Lone Star Asks Rate Increase

DALLAS

Lone Star Gas Company today announced that it will file an application with the Texas Railroad Commission for an increase in the city gate rate for gas delivered to each town served by the company in Texas.

The primary factors involved in Lone Star's application relate to the cost of maintaining an adequate gas supply for customers, and contracting for new supplies to meet growing consumer demands.

The individual items included in the company's rate increase proposal are:

(1) the right to recover costs and return of $7.2 million associated with the firm's West Texas Gas Supply System, an approximate 400 mile large - diameter pipeline system from West Texas to the Dallas-Fort Worth area;

(2) the right to recover costs and return of $0.8 million approximately $9.6 million in advance payments and prepayments the company thus far has made to producers as a part of new gas purchase agreements;

(3) to bring the company's weighted average cost of gas used in the Commission's calculation of Lone Star's base city gate rate up from the 16.29 - cents per thousand cubic feet to the present level of 20.53 - cents per thousand;

(4) to allow Lone Star to "pass on" 100 percent of its increased cost of purchased gas on a monthly basis, rather than the presently allowed 65 percent every six months.

The cost adjustments would mean an 8.1 - cent per thousand cubic feet increase in the city gate rate, and an increase of $10.5 million in Lone Star's annual revenues when costs are flowed through to customers, based on a 1972 volume of approximately 130 billion cubic feet.

The company further noted that all proposed rate increases are cost justified and within nationally established price control guidelines for utilities established last year.

Reuters Profiles Three Astronauts

CAPE KENNEDY

Reuter--A racing car enthusiast, a Vietnam veteran, and a physician will find themselves orbiting the earth inside a 100-ton metal cylinder during America's most ambitious space project.

They also happen to be astronauts, trained to the peak of perfection in the intricacies of the Skylab workshop which will be their home for a month, spinning around the world once every 93 minutes.

When they dock with the workshop, they will be taking a long scientific look at outer space, the earth, and most importantly, themselves, how they function physically and mentally in a gravity-free environment.

The racing car enthusiast is the mission commander, Navy Capt. Charles (Pete) Conrad, Jr. who has walked on the moon and flown two Gemini missions.

Cmdr. Joseph P. Kerwin is the first medical doctor to be on the crew of an American space mission and will be equipped to do minor surgery aboard Skylab. He is also an experienced Navy jet pilot.

The third crewman, Cmdr. Paul J. Weitz, flew 132 combat missions over Vietnam in the early part of the war --which greatly adds to his prestige among other fliers.

The following are profiles of the men:

CONRAD

Conrad, who turns 43 on June 2 while orbiting 270 miles above the earth, runs counter to the popular image of American astronauts as sober, conservative men with indistinguishable personalities.

Fiesty, with a penchant for high - living, Conrad comes closest to being the playboy of the group -- and this in spite of a well-to-do Philadelphia background.

His flight experience began at 14 with private lessons. He attended two private schools before going to Princeton.

There are no other Ivy Leaguers in the astronaut corps and none from as wealthy a family (his parents are divorced, with his father being re-married and living in retirement in Florida).

A former test pilot in the armaments division of the navy test pilot school at Patuxent River, Maryland, Conrad was selected as an astronaut by NASA in 1962.

In 1965, he and Gordon Cooper chalked up a space endurance record of nearly 191 hours in space aboard the Gemini 5 flight--giving the U.S. the lead in man-hours in space. He commanded the Apollo XII Moon mission, the second moon landing.

Conrad likes to relax by listening to country misic. He also loves the thrill of speed at sea and on the racetrack. He has given up sailboat racing, but still races cars when he has the opportunity.

KERWIN

Kerwin, 41, is an Irish Catholic from the Chicago suburb of Oak Park. One of eight children, he was a flight surgeon in the Marines before becoming a naval aviator in 1958.

He logged up 2,000 hours flying time and joined NASA in 1965 as a scientist - astronaut.

Without a doubt, he is the widest read of the astronauts. It would be difficult to come up with a category or author he is not familiar with.

He is taking "Chesterton's "A Short History of the United States" and a book of collected verse with him on Skylab.

Kerwin is also taking all seven of Edward Fitzgerald's translations of the Rubaiyat or Omar Khayyam to figure out how they differ.

Kerwin's taste in music is strictly classical, in contrast to Conrad's country stuff and what Weitz calls the "oldies," such as groups like the Ink Spots.

Kerwin is thoroughly familiar with everything on Skylab, which has more than 100 experiments aboard, Naturally, he is most interested in the long list of medical experiments.

WEITZ

Weitz, 40, conforms most closely to how most people envisage a U.S. astronaut. Blond, blue-eyed, and taciturn, he is very much the family man.

"Not that I know of," is his replay when asked about any close calls as a pilot or in the Vietnam war.

"Nothing in particular," Weitz says when asked what he is particularly interested in about Skylab.

Had he talked much to his wife and two children about the mission? "Not much at all. They don't ask me much. I may be remiss or something. Maybe they're not interested."

Weitz' idea of a great meal "is Italian food and beer, lots of beer."

Like Conrad, Weitz comes from Pennsylvania, but unlike his skipper, Weitz was born in Erie fro middle-class country stock. His father was a chief petty officer in the Navy.

He received his commission through an officer - training program at Pennsylvania State University, and before going to Vietnam in 1965 was an instructor at an air base in Jacksonville, Florida.

He received various medals for his conduct during his stint in Vietnam, including the Secretary of the Navy commendation for leading a flak-damaged plane to a safe landing.

More Meat in Offing

Consumers can look forward to bigger supplies of red meat during 1973, according to a U.S. Department of Agriculture forecast. A larger calf crop in 1972 plus an expected increase in pig output during the late spring farrowing season and during the last half of the year leads to this conclusion. The U.S. cattle inventory at the beginning of 1973 is expected to be about 4 million head over a year ago.

SOME "GUARDIAN ANGELS" LOOK A LITTLE DIFFERENT

And some of them, such as this one, have unusual names. Electrostatic precipitator. It's a protective guardian of the air you and your children breathe—a complex, mechanical giant being installed at Texas Power & Light Company's new lignite-fueled generating plants to safeguard the quality of the air—and your environment.

But it's only one of the guardian measures TP&L uses. Soil is reclaimed at lignite plants by sodding beneficial grasses in areas where lignite has been produced. TP&L also conducts water and aquatic life studies in its power plant reservoirs to find better ways to preserve (and enhance) the quality of both. Even new substations are being designed to be eye-pleasing.

As your needs for electricity continue to grow, TP&L must also—but we do it with protective concern for the environment.

Baylor Studies Prairie

Prairie grass plowed and crossed in covered wagons by American pioneers will be studied by environmental students on the Baylor University campus.

One of the few reamining patches of blackland prairie in the area, which once covered probably covered half of McLennan County, has been transplanted by Baylor to its new Natural Science Center near the Brazos River and University Parks Drive in Waco and to a site prepared by the Corps of Engineers in Speegleville Park in the Central Texas county.

To ensure continued study of the natural balances and interdependencies that have perpetuated prairie lands for as long as several thousand years, Baylor students and faculty have invested weeks of intensive study and a delicate process of transplanting the prairie sod.

The three acres now at the Baylor site were transplanted according to a pattern determined by the study to "reconstruction the original prairie as much as possible," Dr. Fred R. Gehlbach, associated professor of biology at Baylor, said.

"To my knowledge this type of project has never been attempted in Central Texas," Gehlbach said. "The unique aspect is the reconstruction of the original prairie."

The original site of the prairie, between the McGregor highway and IH 35 on Loop 340, was selected for the construction of a new building and parking area for Darr Equipment Co., owner of the land. The company agreed to the study of the land by Baylor.

The study and mapping of the prairie land showed the prairie supports as many as 18 different native grasses and 100 forbs and small animals. Gehlbach said small prairie animals will eventually be introduced at the new site.

"The grass is growing at the new site," Ghelbach said, "but will take about 10 years to reestablish the ecosystem that has enabled the prairie's continuous existence."

A study of the interdependencies in the naturally and delicately balanced ecosystem will be a main study at Baylor. The original site had maintained itself for possiblly thousands of years because it was never plowed. Because the surrounding area is rapidly developing, Gehlbach said the prairie possibly could not have continued as an ecosystem.

Librarians To Meet At Corpus

Texas librarians will gather in Corpus Christi on May 23 for a three-day session to explore ways of developing and carrying out programs for children in their libraries. The workshop being sponsored by La Retama Public Library Corpus Christi and the Texas State Library will include book selection for children, methods of handling story hours, and techniques for conducting puppet shows.

Mrs. Celia Carroll, children's coordinator for Austin Public Library, will conduct the session that will be held at the Corpus Christi Museum.

Although librarians from libraries of all sizes have been invited to the workshop, it is designed especially for medium - sized and small libraries. Since many of these libraries do not have staff members with professional training in children's work, Mrs. Carroll will focus attention on methods for setting up a fairly comprehensive childrens' program.

"In talking to libraries," she said, "I find that work with children presents the same problems almost everywhere." These include selecting materials, choosing appropriate times for story hours, problems of finding staff time for developing story sessions, and working with volunteers who help in many childrens' programs.

Fr. Delaney To Say Mass In Cameron

Rev. Dan Delaney of Houston, ordained a priest of the Catholic Church May 12 at St. Mary's Cathedral in Austin, will say his first mass 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, May 23, at St. Monica's Catholic Church, Cameron.

Fr. Delaney operated the Cameron Municipal Swimming Pool for two summers while a college student. He attended Stephen F. Austin State University and St. Mary's Seminary in Houston. He received his B.A. and M. Th. Degrees from the University of St. Thomas.

He has worked with youth programs at St. Monica's Catholic Church and with various religious and youth programs and St. Francis de Sales Deaf Society in Houston.

St. Monica's Ladies will honor Fr. Delaney at a reception following the mass. The public is invited to the service.

GED Tests Set For Students

The General Educational Development (GED) tests for the spring semester will be held in Marlin at the Marlin Middle School and in Cameron at the Cameron Junior High School May 21, 22 and 23.

Testing will begin each night promptly at 6:30 p.m. with a qualified counselor at each testing center to give the tests.

Wayne Kirk, Adult Basic Education director for the district involved in this testing, suggested that Hearne and Calvert meet with the group in Marlin.

He said Rockdale, Gause, Rogers and Cameron students should report to Cameron.

Others interested should contact Kirk; Max McClaren, Milam County School Superintendent; and in Cameron Mrs. Jeanie Kirk or Mrs. Patsy Matula.

Classes will be held through May 31 in Cameron for those people not taking the GED tests. New classes will form in September.

Accent on Health

In its continuing effort to control air pollution, the State Health Department's Air Pollution Control Services has gone into the trailer business.

The trailers actually are portable air monitoring stations, which will monitor all major air pollutants in the urban areas of the State.

The first of the stations, designed to detect dangerous pollution buildups, went into operation in April at an elementary school in Jacinto City near the Houston Ship Channel.

Super sophisticated instruments in the movable trailer-like station measure about a dozen different pollutants continuously and automatically. The station teletypes instant pollution readings to the State Health Department's Air Pollution Control Services headquarters in Austin during periods of air stagnation.

Roger Wallis, chief air quality evaluator, said the station's continuous readings also will help determine steps needed to comply with federal air standards.

Additional monitoring stations will be set up in the Houston region, probably by next fall. Eventually, 12 stations will be put in operation throughout the State.

Wallis hopes the full 12-station network can be operating by fall. By early summer, stations are expected to be set up in Beaumont, Corpus Christi and Dallas. All major urban areas of Texas will have at least one station.

Wallis said the staff of Air Pollution Control Services is designing and assembling the $60,000 stations itself after determining that each would cost at least $85,000 if built by an outside contractor.

Using gas chromatographs and other instruments, the new station monitors carbon monoxide, hydrocarbons, methane, sulfur compounds, ozone, nitrogen oxides and other pollutants.

Deck, Bench Encircle Tree

An easily built garden seat or lounging deck adds comfort under a tree and eliminates the damage from scraping bark or exposed roots while mowing.

A hexagonal garden seat is built on a box frame of 2x12-inch treated western wood set on edge. The inner frame is three to four feet wide, and the outer frame eight feet wide. Planks are cut at 60-degree angles for joints.

Decking of 2x4s is laid flat over the box frame and trimmed flush to the edges. A capping strip of 2x2s nailed to the decking adds a finished look.

More than 3,000 professional foresters work in Oregon and Washington, the two most heavily timbered states.
